Alma Laura Felber (b. 1949, Lima, Peru) moved to London at the young age of 19. In her early 20s, she took up her current painting practice.

Felber observes the world through her unique lens, which allows her to explore her own identity alongside themes of sexuality, race, the feminine, the body, the family, the imagined and the current. In her colour-filled works, Alma Laura distils memories and snapshots of life's moments and experiences, capturing human connection mixed with elements of nostalgia. Alma Laura has had solo exhibitions in Lima and London, and her works are included in private collections in Latin America, the US and Europe.

“Painting keeps me sane. It makes me feel I am part of this universe. I feel alive. And it's the moment when I feel more comfortable.”

POA

Amalgama Art is a London-based cultural programme devoted to championing and exhibiting the work of women artists from Latin America, Spain and Portugal: Ibero-America. Our timely goal is to challenge current gender disparities in the art world, through group and solo exhibitions, publications and a public programme of workshops, art history courses, podcasts and talks to increase the visibility and participation of these artists.
